Season Affiliate Marketing – King Arthur Style!

Welcome to another chapter of how King Arthur, and his loyal Knights of the Round Table, were dabbling into the mysteries of more than just plain 'ole affiliate marketing.... They decided to niche even deeper, and see how seasonal affiliate marketing might warm them to the cockles of their hearts!

But we're getting ahead of ourselves!

Let's *first* update where ChatGPT is these days.

The Prelude (and there was much rejoicing!)

Long long ago, when knights rode around on horse-drawn Teslas or at the very least, possessed two coconuts that they'd be bangin' em together all day, a new craze hit the Internet – ChatGPT!

And during the past 10 months or so, my gosh, the... developments!

We've seen a new version of ChatGPT emerge – GPT4 that can now understand voice, it accepts image prompts (!), it offers a plugin library where you can extend the abilities of GPT4 like being able to browse the Internet after the original data cutoff point, and many more goodies as well.

And if you were to think of AI in general? It seems like every day, some new AI app is released (mainly because every day, new AI apps are released – just check this popular directory over here!). And you know what that means?

Power AICash Tips Plus Some Hilariously Funny Times

Why, it means that every day, you can mix and match different AI technologies, or even simply put ChatGPT thru its paces to create:

- Custom Affiliate Marketing eMails
- Click-worthy Titles for eMail Marketing
- Alternatives for your own Writing so you can ensure you never make common writing mistakes
- SEO Articles

And so so so SO very much... more.

Consider that example I had once mentioned awhile back while trying to debug an issue I came across:

What's REALLY cool about the above:

- Prior to that specific day, I had NEVER done ANYTHING with 'curl'. As in, nothing, zero zip!
- And yet, I was able to somehow stumble around in the dark and ask ChatGPT to help me debug it. ChatGPT proceeded to do so and OMG OMG OMG – it *WORKED*!

In the previous example, my prompt was basically HELP! I have no idea what I'm doing! Please heeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeelp!!!

That, more than anything else in this report, should demonstrate the sheer awesome power of ChatGPT – even when you have less clues than a mime trying to explain quantum physics, you can *still* discover the answer you *need*.

How incredible is THAT?

But we're getting ahead of ourselves.

First, there's something SO important, we NEED to solve that before doing anything else! I'm positive you'll agree with me – it's figuring out :

How would King Arthur educate his adorable knights who this time, decided that if general affiliate marketing was glorious, niche affiliate marketing like seasonal affiliate marketing must be even better!

How did King Arthur manage to steer his eager yet oddly incompetent knights to the right direction?

Such a great question! Without any further ado, behold!

The (Newfangled) Tale of Sir Bedevere the Wise

It 'twas the early afternoon, and....

---

Scene 1: The Round Table at Camelot

<The knights are seated around the Round Table, which is covered in scrolls, quills, and a medieval laptop. Sir Bedevere the Wise is hunched over the communal Medieval Laptop, muttering to himself.>

Sir Bedevere the Wise: Ah, verily, 'twas none other than I, Sir Bedevere the Wise, who first brought forth the notion of seasonal affiliate marketing to our noble King Arthur. I counseled that we, the esteemed Knights of the Round Table, should enter into pacts with merchants and artisans. By heralding their goods during these prosperous seasons, we would gain a portion of the earnings—a stratagem most astute, if I may say so!

Verily I did observe the cyclical nature of the seasons, each bearing its own set of yearnings amongst the common folk and nobility alike. "In the chill of winter, 'tis cloaks and warm mead that are sought after. With the arrival of spring, seeds and implements for tilling the soil become the desire," quoth I. Yet, did our King Arthur laud my prescient counsel? Nay, he did not! The task should have fallen upon Sir Robin, know far and wide for his skill at being never where danger rears its ugly head, for it is a labor far below the skills I possess.

<Sir Bedevere then grumbled to his audience of gallant fowls, courageous chickens that have struck fear into the hearts of many a rabbit. Suddenly, an epiphany struck him.>

Ah, the alchemy of seasonal affiliate marketing! As the leaves turn and the air grows crisp, the time is ripe for the infusion of pumpkin spice lattes!

<He smugly clicks a few buttons (after all, his title IS the Wise) and smiles triumphantly, convinced that his wisdom has once again prevailed.>

Scene 2: A Peasant Village in Autumn

<Sir Bedevere the Wise arrives in the village square, riding a horse that's been painted orange to resemble a pumpkin.>

Sir Bedevere the Wise: Hear ye, hear ye! Acquire thy pumpkin spice lattes here!

<The Villagers look confused. A cow moos in the distance.>

Villager: What sorcery is this 'latte' thou speaketh of?

<Sir Bedevere, annoyed that the villagers do not immediately throw themselves at his feet in blind adoration of his lattes, tried once more.>

Sir Bedevere the Wise: A latte is a perfectly delightful beverage made popular by the global chain of Starbucks, some 800 odd years in the fuutcha.

Villager: The fuutcha?

Sir Bedevere the Wise: Yes you dolt, it yet to be invented!

<The villagers fell silent. Sir Bedevere the Wise realized that if it yet to be invented, he could simply not sell it! But transfixed by the sight of the 76 pumpkin spice lattes he had brought with him, he rapidly experienced an Operating System error akin to dividing by 0 and collapsed on the spot>

Other Villagers: If this is what nobility is, it's no wonder the Kingdom is sinking faster than a lead balloon in a pond and crowding out all watery male tarts and female tarts and Pop tarts trying to lob swords at unqualified Kings!

<The Villagers load Sir Bedevere the Wise into a trebuchet and return him to King Arthur>

Scene 3: The Round Table at Camelot, Winter

<Sir Bedevere the Wise was positive that his failed seasonal affiliate marketing attempt would have succeeded if only the villagers had ignored reality. However, as knights known as “the Wise” would generally NOT attempt to force such an issue (unless of course, they were backed by an army of Moopsies), he was forced to consider new ideas and asked Sir Robin the Not-So-Brave-as-Sir-Lancelot what he would have done instead.>

Sir Robin the Not-So-Brave-as-Sir-Lancelot: To be honest, verily, 'twas such a relief that 'twas not I who hath failed in such a grand manner, that I simply returned to selling shovels to the peasantry.

After all, you *do* remember that during the Shrubbery Mania the only people, nobility and peasantry alike, who realized a profitable seasonal affiliate marketing season were those cunning wise knaves who sold shrubbery shovels instead to the Knights who Say Ni! because owneth them, the entire market, right?

Sir Bedevere the Wise: <envisioning introducing Sir Robin the Not-So-Brave-as-Sir-Lancelot to his very special friend named Moosy> Of course I do. Who else amongst our fellow knights are known as “The Wise”??

Scene 4: The Round Table at Camelot, Spring

---

Sir Bedevere the Wise: Lo, the vernal season hath arrived! A time of rebirth and renewal. I shall peddle gardening tools to yon peasants.

<He hums to himself while clicking a few buttons on the medieval laptop, certain that his wisdom will not fail him this time.>

Scene 5: A Peasant Village in Spring

<Sir Bedevere the Wise arrives, holding a watering can and a hoe.>

Sir Bedevere the Wise: Hear ye, hear ye! Equip thyself with these fine gardening tools!

<A torrential downpour begins, washing him and his tools away. The peasants laugh, finding his misfortune more entertaining than any jester. Sir Bedevere the Wise retreats, vowing revenge.>

---

Scene 6: The Round Table at Camelot, Summer

---

<Sir Bedevere the Wise returns, soaking wet and covered in mud.>

Sir Robin the Not-So-Brave-as-Sir-Lancelot: By the heavens, the mirth I find in another's failure is unparalleled!

<Sir Bedevere the Wise chalks up 2 for the seasonal affiliate market of revenge.>

---

Scene 7: The Round Table at Camelot, Summer

---

Sir Bedevere the Wise: (sighs) King Arthur, I must confess, I have thrice failed in the art of seasonal affiliate marketing.

King Arthur: Ah, Sir Bedevere, even the wise must sometimes seek wisdom. Let me share with thee the perilous Ten Commandments of Seasonal Affiliate Marketing, as told by the Most Blessedly Wise Oracle of the Kingdom, ChatGPT.

Sir Lancelot the Brave: A quest without peril? What's next, a dragon that breathes compliments instead of fire?

Sir Galahad the Pure: If this Oracle is as wise as you say, can it tell me how to turn water into wine? For purely sacramental purposes, of course.

Sir Robin the Not-Quite-So-Brave-as-Sir-Lancelot: Ah, a quest that involves no peril, monsters, or killer rabbits? Count me in!

<The knights found such jests so uproarious that they were stricken with ceaseless mirth for a fortnight hence! Their voices worn and raspy from such hearty laughter, each knight took to a solemn vow of silence until the morn. Yet, come dawn, they were assailed by most vexing sneezes at every hour.

Spirits grew heated, and challenges of duels were hurled like wicked stones in a catapult. 'Twas not until the village herbalist, however, wise in the ways of flora (and also as Sir Bedevere was not), revealed the culprit. "Lo," quoth she, "it is the pollen from yon summer blossoms, used in your nocturnal courtships, that hath exacted its revenge upon thee!! "Remember," she said, wagging her finger in the Knight's faces, "You lot are pretty as the bee's knees, but mightier than thou libido is the flower's sneeze!"

Unfortunately, the herbalist's pun was so abysmal, so utterly devoid of humor, that it tore the very fabric of the comedic universe!

Lo and behold, a portal of swirling colors and lights appeared in the center of the Round Table. From it emerged Merlin himself, his beard more frazzled than usual and his eyes ablaze with indignation. "Forsooth!" he exclaimed, "Never in my centuries of wizardry have I heard a pun so terrible that it compelled me to leave my ethereal Netflix binge-watching!"

The knights, already bewildered by the herbalist's pun, were now utterly chastened. They looked at each other, then at their swords, and realized no amount of steel could defend them from their lack of humor. "Hark!" said Merlin, "I shall postpone my binge-watching to offer thee a solution. Attend my comedy school, where thou shalt learn the art of jest, wit, and the proper use of a pun!">

<And in that blinding moment, everyone... disappeared.

Merlin.

King Arthur.

All of his Knights of the Round Table.

Lost within The Space Between Time and Space, all of their souls wandered. Was that a swallow overhead, carrying a coconut? Had a day passed? Had a (wait for it) knight instead? A day AND a Knight? A year? Centuries unknown to galaxies beyond The Space Between Time and Space...

Not of it had any meaning.

Until, that is...>

Scene 9: King Arthur Recounts

King Arthur: By Merlin's beard, no, wait, scratch that, let me use something a tad less obsessed over humor and silly puns or even worse, the most unsilly that one could listen to for eons beyond measure.

My good knights are still recovering from the dreaded ordeal that befell us all; Sir Bedevere the Wise is still muttering about something called a "Moopsy" which apparently shares many of the same characteristics of the Killer Rabbit. It certainly couldn't be much worse now, can it?

In any event, to you, my loyal Seasonal Affiliate Marketer, I would like now to share with ye the 10 Commandments of Seasonal Affiliate Marketing by the Wise Oracle of our Realm: ChatGPT. To haste!

Commandment 1: Research the Calendar

Just as Sir Bedevere would never embark on a witch hunt without first consulting the lunar calendar, so too must thou scrutinize the annual calendar. Mark down the holidays, seasonal shifts, and special events that stir the hearts of the populace!

Doing so shall grant thee a strategic overview, akin to knowing the layout of Castle Anthrax before embarking on a quest. Knowing when the populace celebrates can help thee align thy marketing strategies with their moods and needs. For example, thou wouldn't want to promote beachwear during the Feast of Stephen, wouldst thou?

Commandment 2: Identify Seasonal Products

Think of this as Sir Lancelot's inventory before storming Swamp Castle: chainmail for battles and bouquets for unexpected weddings. Knowing what thy subjects desire in each season is crucial for aligning thy offerings with their needs.

For instance, promoting Holy Hand Grenades of Antioch during rabbit season could prove most lucrative indeed!

On the other hand, offering shrubberies during the winter months might not yield the same results. Therefore, a keen understanding of seasonal products is as essential as knowing the airspeed velocity of an unladen swallow.

Commandment 3: Analyze Past Data

Pore over thy ancient ledgers and scrolls as if they were the Book of Armaments. When did thy coffers swell with gold?

Was it during the Festival of the Knights Who Say 'Ni'? Such historical data can offer invaluable insights into what works and what leads to a quest as futile as Sir Robin's search for bravery.

Just as we learned not to underestimate the ferocity of a seemingly harmless rabbit, thou canst learn from past marketing endeavors. Analyzing past data allows thee to avoid the pitfalls of previous campaigns, like avoiding the Bridge of Death without knowing the capital of Assyria.

Commandment 4: Early Planning

Do not dawdle like Sir Robin when faced with the Three-Headed Knight. Planning thy campaigns well in advance gives thee ample time to prepare.

This is the stage where thou canst compose ballads, design heraldic banners, and even train thy coconut-carrying swallows to simulate horse gallops. Just as we wouldn't set forth on a quest without first gathering our Holy Hand Grenades, thou shouldn't start a seasonal campaign without proper planning.

Remember, a well-planned campaign is like a well-executed Trojan Rabbit—it catches the enemy by surprise and leaves them utterly bewildered.

Commandment 5: Update Content

If thou hast scrolls or parchments gathering dust in the castle library, breathe new life into them!

A few quill strokes can transform a stale guide on "How to Defeat a Black Knight" into a seasonal sensation like "How to Defeat Black Knights with Yuletide Cheer!"

Just as Sir Bedevere realized that a simple weight test could determine a witch, thou canst realize that a simple update can rejuvenate old content. This is especially useful if thy marketing coffers are as empty as the lands plagued by the Knights Who Say 'Ni.'

By updating existing content, thou art essentially getting more mileage out of thy previous efforts, much like how we got more mileage out of our 'horse' by simply banging coconuts together.

Commandment 6: SEO Optimization

Just as the Knights Who Say 'Ni' change their name to the Knights Who Say 'Ekki-Ekki-Ekki-Pitang-Zoom-Boing,' so too must thy SEO adapt to seasonal queries.

Update thy magical keywords to match the season, ensuring that thy content appears in the Oracle of Google when subjects seek it.

Think of SEO as the riddles of the Bridge of Death—answer correctly, and thou shalt pass to the land of high search rankings. Fail, and thou art cast into the Gorge of Eternal Peril, or worse, the second page of Google.

Remember, a well-optimized page is like a well-armed knight—it stands a better chance in the battle for attention.

Commandment 7: Email Campaigns

Dispatch thy messages via raven or, if thou art feeling particularly innovative, trained swallows with tiny parchments tied to their legs.

A well-timed message can be as impactful as Sir

Lancelot bursting into Swamp Castle—completely unexpected but utterly unforgettable. Consider the timing, the message, and the call-to-action.

A well-crafted email is like the Holy Hand Grenade—it must be deployed at just the right moment for maximum impact.

And just like the Holy Hand Grenade, thou must count to three, no more, no less, before sending it. Three shall be the number of the counting, and the number of the counting shall be three.

Commandment 8: Social Media Buzz

Weave a tapestry of social media tales as intricate as the Quest for the Holy Grail itself. Use teasers, countdowns, and special offers to generate excitement among thy followers.

A well-placed meme can spread faster than the tale of the Killer Rabbit of Caerbannog. Social media is thy round table, where all thy knights—ahem, followers—gather to hear tales of thy quests and offerings. But beware the trolls, for they are as perilous as the Black Beast of Aaaaarrrrrrggghh.

Engage with thy audience but do so wisely, for the Internet is a land full of peril and Knights Who Say 'Ni.'

Commandment 9: Monitor and Tweak

Keep a vigilant eye on thy metrics, much like Sir Bedevere watching for witches at the village fair. Are people clicking but not converting? Perhaps thy call-to-action needs more urgency, akin to yelling "Run away!" when faced with the Killer Rabbit.

Monitoring allows thee to make real-time adjustments, much like how we quickly learned to never underestimate the power of a rabbit with big, pointy teeth. If something isn't working, don't hesitate to tweak it.

After all, flexibility in strategy is what saved us from the peril of the Castle

Anthrax.

Commandment 10: Post-Season Review

Once the season hath concluded, gather thy knights around the Round Table for a debrief. Discuss what strategies were as successful as the Trojan Rabbit and what failed as miserably as Sir Robin's minstrels.

This is thy opportunity to learn, adapt, and prepare for the next seasonal quest. Take notes, make plans, and vow to do better, much like how we vowed to never again send Sir Robin to negotiate with a three-headed giant.

Remember, the quest for perfect marketing is like the quest for the Holy Grail—endless but full of opportunities for glory and gold!

The End

Didn't that story just bring a tear of joy to your heart and soul?

Well, if not.... It *did* most likely give you at least *1* chuckle. 😊

So let's then dive into something of even more profound beauty...
